Ramey in a rooming house at Elco, Washington County, by city and county detectives in connection with the robbery of the First National Bank of Finleyville on May 24, was partially identified today as one of the seven bandits who robbed the bank. He was identified by John Zwick, a resident of Finleyville who saw the bandits enter an automobile near the bank. Zwick was not positive of the identification. He declared that Hogan resembled one of the bandits somewhat but he could not say Hogan was a member of the gang who robbed the bank. About $15,000 in cash and $30,000 in negotiable securities was seized by the robbers. John Zimmers and Frank Martin arrested yesterday were released today.

HARDING AND WOOD EACH SPENT $100,000 IN OHIO

WASHINGTON, June 1—Robert L. Wolf, of Columbus, Ohio, newspaper publisher, testified today concerning the Harding presidential campaign before the Senate campaign expenditures committee. He said he thought that the Wood and Harding campaigns in Ohio each cost about $100,000 but denied exact knowledge. "Your activities were rather against the Harding management than for it weren't they," Senator Pomerene asked. "Yes sir, the political group managing the Harding campaign is a menace to the state," Wolf declared. He said he had little definite knowledge of the amount of the fund in the state.

WANT FERRY BOAT AT DEER
CREEK

The people in the Deer Creek country and the entire region served by the Deer Creek bridge, which will not likely be replaced this year, are very badly handicapped and discommoded through the loss of the bridge, which went down with the ice early in March last. They feel that a ferry boat should be placed in the river at this point and will petition the County Commissioners to secure a cable and flat boat for such a purpose, the operator of the same to secure remuneration for his services from the travelers he ferries across the river. The expense to the county would be nominal and the necessity for such service seems to require it, and at once.

Mrs. Best has returned from spending the past month in Canton, Ohio.

NEW YORK, June 1—Ten men were injured today when fire started in the forecastle of the steamship Powhatan which was being overhauled in the Morse dry dock at Brooklyn. Five of the injured men are firemen. All will probably recover.

BONUS BILL
PASSES HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 1—The soldier bonus bill, with benefits of more than $1,400,000,000 for approximately 3,500,000 of the ex-service men, was passed and sent to the senate Saturday by the house.

It received a majority of more than three to one, after a special rule was adopted blocking all amendments. The final vote was 289 to 92, or thirty-five votes more than the necessary two-thirds majority required under the parliamentary procedure to keep out amendments.

Additional taxes of approximately $1,350,000,000, the payment of which would be started next December and continue for three years, are imposed by the bill. None of the benefits granted will be available until June 1, 1921.

The service men are given the option of the cash bonus, home aid, land settlement, paid-up insurance or vocational training and the taxes are imposed upon real estate transfers, stock and grain transactions, with increases over the present sur taxes and tobacco levies.

Final action was had after a fight which developed extreme bitterness and three preliminary tests of strength in which the bonus supporters showed steady gains.

The house was in a wild uproar and confusion through the debate. Speaker Gillett was unable to restore order at any time. Several times the house chamber was a veritable bellamy. Cheers and applause were met by jeers and boos. However loud a speaker raised his voice there were persistent cries of "louder, louder, come down front."

"The measure is the greatest peace-time revenue bill in the history of the country, but debate on it was limited to 40 minutes over the protests of the Democrats and insurgent Republicans who sought to amend the measure.

No immediate action on the measure is contemplated in the senate. It is virtually certain that no action will be taken before the proposed adjournment or recess the latter part of next week.

Congressman Evan J. Jones was one of those who supported the bonus bill.

WILL RUN AGAIN
IF HE GETS OUT

ATLANTA, Ga., May 29—The strangest notification ceremony for any candidate for president of the United States occurred at the federal prison here today, when a committee of Socialists told Eugene V. Debs he had been nominated for the fifth time.

Debs threw his arms about each member of the committee and with a kiss upon the lips for each, declared he was happy beyond words.

"I have always been a radical—never more so than now," Debs declared in his speech of acceptance. "I have never been afraid of becoming too radical but I have feared becoming conservative."

He quoted a speech before his imprisonment for violation of the espionage act in which he declared his sympathy with the Russian revolution.

"I said I was a Bolshevik, and I meant it—and I mean it now," he asserted.

A member of the committee applauded.

The official reception took place in the office of Prison Warden Zerbst, who permitted motion pictures to be made, both in the office and on the front steps outside the prison walls, in which the ceremony of presenting the bouquet of red carnations and the kisses of greeting were repeated.

Miss Helen Dunsmore, of Phillipsburg, attended the Senior reception at the High School last evening and was a guest at the home of W. E. Phillips on Fourth street.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK
AT THE HIGH SCHOOLBACCALAUREATE SERMON BY REV. A.
R. BALDWIN SUNDAY EVENING; SENIOR
RECEPTION LAST EVENING

COMMENCEMENT TOMORROW EVE

The Commencement week activities of the Clearfield High School opened auspiciously Sunday evening with the baccalaureate sermon which was preached by Rev. A. R. Baldwin, of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, to an assemblage which crowded the spacious High School auditorium to its utmost capacity.

Rev. Baldwin took for his theme "The Opportunity of Ambition" and his masterly discourse was most favorably commented upon by his auditors generally. His sermon, in part, follows:

The Senior Class reception at the High School auditorium last evening was a particularly brilliant gathering, which was participated in by the twenty-four members of the class, their parents and friends enjoying the occasion immensely.

The Junior High School commencement was held last evening and the Eighth Graders will present "Paul Revere's Ride" at the High School auditorium this evening.

The Senior Class commencement will be held Wednesday evening.

"I Can Do All Things Through Christ That Strengthen Me. I Have Strength For All Things In Him That Empowereth Me."

(Philippians IV, 13.)

Our true attitude to the past is one of reverence and veneration. We are heirs of the past, stewards of the present and trustees of the future. The great law of evolution has emphasized an indebtedness to the past by showing us how the permanent and valuable acquisitions of the age are transmitted to the heirs of the ages. It has emphasized our relations to the present by pointing out the importance of environment. It has emphasized our relations to the future by showing how the whole process of nature is striving for a richer and more abundant life, and that where one generation fails to attain it prepares a generation that is to follow.

We cannot therefore, ignore our inheritance, be it what it may, for it will lead us to the present, the time of opportunity and advantage.

The attitude of mind, the personal conception of existence are a heritage of the past. Mantled in the cloak of oblivion, yet still it hovers over near a reminder, influence and mould our trainings upon a pattern that was begun ages ago and brought to us by the efforts of our ancestors, their intellects and attainments to realize its perfection and completion.

We cannot be unmindful of the acquisitions of our ancestors. The past is a great inheritance, the present a splendid opportunity and the future a noble incentive.

Failure to respond to any one of the influences means delay and hindrance in the direction of true progress. We may be so engrossed in the present as to be oblivious of the past and careless of the future.

The influence of the past may be so strong as to call us away from our own attainment; that of the present may cause us to rush headlong into oblivion and fail for the future.

He is a great man who can feel all the influences and give the right response to each.

To feel the thrill of ambition impelling one toward attainment is a noble and inspiring quality, but to be successful, it must be cumulative. It is only by careful preparation that we are able to grasp the opportunity of ambition.

Preparation and education alone can produce the desired results. Right thinking, right living and right knowledge leads us to cultivated intellect which has a command of the universe.

Ambition, emulation and rivalry play an important part in the education of the world. We cannot shut our eyes to its splendid achievement in politics, in social life, in mechanical inventions, in literature and art. It is stimulus that produces valuable results.

If ambition leads on the last inspiration of many a noble mind. If by ambition angels fell, by ambition men have risen. It has been the ideal and draws us upward from lower to higher. If it is clear-headed ambition, the worst evils which have afflicted mankind it must be combined also with the most splendid advances in human progress and civilization.

I speak to you therefore, as to ambitious young men and women. These are only as beyond hope who have no spirit of emulation, no craving for excellence—those only in whom there are devoid of ambition. Seek therefore, to possess this quality. But be sure to purify your ambition, to consecrate it, to direct it through worthy channels and to worthy aims.

If indeed ambition has achieved splendid results, it can only have done so by virtue of splendid qualities. It must contain in itself true and shining elements which we cannot afford to neglect.

The chief element in ambition is a pursuit of power. The consciousness of power gives a satisfaction quite independently of the exercise of power. Whatever form power may take, whether intellectual eminence or social influence or physical strength, it is a thing which man desires, which he cannot help desiring, he and for himself. It is seed of splendid achievements, a germ of training and cultivation. By our very constitution we feel a happiness in making the best of ourselves; in developing and improving our faculties, irrespective of any ulterior results. But a faculty improved is a power gained.

It would stimulate in you that high spirit of ambition which forms the seed of great achievement. I ask you to play for power, to pursue power, to grasp at power with all the force and determination of your command.

Are you not the men and women of tomorrow and who among you the

Ask the ten best dairymen you know
"Do you feed on Pasture?"

Their answers will convince you that the big producers don't depend upon grass, but find it necessary to supply elements that properly balance it. Most grass is so deficient in protein that a cow would have to eat several times her capacity to obtain enough protein for her maximum production—grass is practically never balanced.

This is why repeated tests have shown that the average cow on pasture will produce
6 lbs. more milk per day

when fed Purina Cow Chow. This increase is obtained at an additional cost of about 10c per day per cow. Figure what this would mean to you for a week or a month.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

CURWENSVILLE

Frank S. Thompson and son came up from Philadelphia and spent several days of this week with Mr. Thompson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Thompson.

George Goodwin, a former Curwensville boy, now located in Cincinnati, Ohio, was a Curwensville visitor over Sunday. He is a son of Edgar Goodwin, a former postmaster of this place.

A fire alarm for the First Ward was sounded Monday forenoon at a little after 9 o'clock. Firemen and citizens in responding to the call, found flames issuing from the second story window of a house occupied by Oscar Ardary and his family. A strong stream of water was turned on and in about five minutes, with the aid of water and chemicals, the flames were quenched. The family's clothing was literally destroyed, as well as considerable household goods. The fire is supposed to have started by some mice igniting matches.

H. S. Landy, a resident of Washington, D. C., arrived in Curwensville Sunday, in order to be present at the wedding of his son, Gilbert M. Landy to Miss Esther Robinson, which took place Monday forenoon at the Robinson home. This was his first visit to our mountain village, and he expressed himself delighted with everything that he saw about the town.

Howard Thompson and family came over from Bellefonte on Sunday, to spend Memorial Day in his native town. V. L. Spencer and wife, also from Bellefonte, and former residents of this town, also spent several with friends.

The annual Baccalaureate sermon for the graduates of the High School was delivered in the Methodist church on Sunday evening, by Rev. J. C. Collins, the pastor. Rev. John Cameron, pastor of the Baptist church, was booked for this occasion, but for some reason best known to himself, failed to respond, and Rev. Collins was substituted. He took for his text a line found in Matthew 5th, 30th verse: "It is profitable for thee?" His discourse was a fine one and delivered in language which every one recognized as coming from a master mind and of deep research. If his hearers, especially the graduates who are just starting out on life's rugged pathway, but follow out his admonition, they cannot help but become better men and women and meet with success in life. Everyone who was present and heard this sermon, was well pleased with the manner in which Rev. Collins handled his subject, and many of his quotations will linger long in their memories. The graduating class has now passed the High School period, and it is now up to them to make good in whatever vocation they assume in their life work.

Philip Robinson came up from Philadelphia, in order to be present at the wedding of his sister, Miss Esther Robinson Monday forenoon.

Dr. Leland Moore, who at one time practiced dentistry in this place, now residing in Altoona, was a Curwensville visitor Monday.

Daniel Leathers, who kept a restaurant on Elbert street during the years that the big mill was in operation in this town, is visiting in the home of his brother, Harry Leathers, in the Nantux colony. He is just recovering from a serious attack of the influenza and was recently discharged from a Cleveland hospital, in which city he has become a resident.

William Daub, who has been employed by the Curwensville Heating and Plumbing Company for three years past, has resigned and will now go it single-handed. He is a good plumber and will not want for employment.

Mrs. Hiram Gawler left for West Virginia Monday, where she will spend several months visiting with relatives and friends.

John W. Sykes, formerly superintendent of the Elk Tannery in this place, now acting in the same capacity of a tannery down in Lycoming county, was here several days this week.

Mrs. J. M. Carlisle, who has been making her home with several of her children at Nantux, Cambria county, was a guest in the home of Captain and Mrs. J. E. Kratzer on Main street, several days this week.

Dorsey Williams, one of the old-time fiddle drummers, who resided in this place for a number of years, was a Curwensville visitor on Monday. Dorsey claims that the brand of music that he touched on all previous occasions years ago, is now a defective issue, as brass bands have taken the place of drums.

then know that they are under suspicion. So long as they are employed at the Granddeck we know where to lay hands on them when we want them."

"That's so," he admitted. "I'll say nothing for the present. As I won't be living there until after this is cleared up, it can make no difference. But, look here, young man, why doesn't this Bradford girl come forward and clear you of this charge? She was with you at the time. She knows you didn't do it."

"Because I will not permit her to do so," I replied with heat. "I love Barbara Bradford!"

"That's it, is it?" he commented, giving me a quizzical glance from under his bushy white eyebrows.

"I wouldn't for all the world," I continued. "Have her mixed up in this. Her sister is to be married tomorrow, and the scandal might stop the wedding; and besides I'm not going to have it known that she was there alone with me that night in my rooms. I love her too well for that. Some day I am going to ask her to be my wife."

He raised his eyebrows.

"And on what do you expect to marry?" he inquired.

"Of course I have said nothing as yet," I hastened to explain; "I've nothing to offer her."

"No," he agreed, "you've nothing to offer her"—and then with a meaning glance he added a little word that in spite of my predicament made my heart sing with joy and stirred my expectations mightily—"you've nothing to offer her—yet."

"But cheer up," he advised as a parting word of counsel. "I'll get in touch with Gorman and your lawyer as soon as I leave here today, and tomorrow we will find out about that secret passage you think you have discovered."

Computation that I ever had doubted the integrity of his purpose toward me snote as he departed. I tried to think of something to say to express my gratitude to him, to let him know how much I appreciated his coming at once to my aid, but the only thing I could think of slipped from my lips: "So am I," he answered grimly, and went his way.

One thing now I certainly was sure of—his was not the master-mind that had planned all the criminal deeds, but the mystery of the Granddeck was still as much of a mystery as ever.

CHAPTER XII.

It was the second day after this—the day set for Claire Bradford's wedding—that in the morning, much earlier than customary, Gorman came to the prison to see me.

I met him jubilantly. My uncle's unexpected return to the city and his generous and convincing offers of aid had filled me with new hopes. I trusted, too, that old Rufus' keen eyes quickly would discover the secret passageway now that I had indicated to him where to look for it. I was confidently expecting that the resulting developments quickly would free me from even the suspicion of being a murderer. The minute, however, that I laid eyes on Gorman I knew that something had gone wrong.

"What is it?" I cried. "What's the matter now?"

"You're a wonderful liar, you are," was his surly greeting, "with your pipe dreams about secret passageways and stolen pearls."

"What do you mean?" I replied. "I had not the least idea what he was getting at."

"You almost had me believing you," he said savagely. "It is true that I knew that Wick and that girl up there were crooks. I would wash my hands of the whole affair."

"I don't understand," I answered indignantly. "Every statement I have made to you has been the absolute truth."

"Yes, it has!" he sneered.

Ordinarily I would have resented anyone talking to me in this manner, but I felt that under no circumstances could I afford to quarrel with Gorman. He was the only friend I had in the whole city that I could rely on, excepting of course my great-uncle. I contented myself with merely reasserting:

"I tell you it is all true—every word of it."

"The old man's home—old Rufus," he responded irrelevantly.

"I know," I replied. "I saw him for a few minutes day before yesterday. He promised to do everything in his power to free me as speedily as possible. After talking with him I am confident that he had nothing whatever to do with any part of the plot. Have you seen him?"

"Yes," said Gorman, significantly. "I've seen him. He looked me up yesterday and we went over the case together. He suggested that we go up to the Granddeck and look over the apartment, and we did. The minute we got in he went to the wall safe and opened it up and—"

Gorman stopped short and looked at me. It seemed to me that there were doubt and distrust in his expression.

"Go on," I cried, "what did you

"You're a Wonderful Liar, You Are," Was His Surly Greeting.

"We found," he said, speaking slowly and putting special emphasis on his third word, "two jewel boxes there, the one with the pearls and the other one."

"What," I cried, aghast at this incredible bit of news, "two jewel cases?"

"Sure we did," he announced triumphantly. "And the pearls were there as safe as when the old man went away. Now what have you got to say to that?"

What could I say? I knew as positively as I knew that I was alive that on that Saturday when I had opened the wall safe to put away my money there had been but one of the jewel boxes there. I had taken it out and had examined its contents again. With the aid of a lighted match I had explored every corner of the steel-lined receptacle. The box containing the pearls and the rest of the valuables in the Gaston collection was gone. Now the pearls were safely back there again. How could that be explained? The mystery was too much for me.

There was not the slightest reason for me to believe that Gorman was lying to me now. I had found him in all our dealings straightforward and candid. If he said he had seen great-uncle Rufus find the pearls there it must be so, but how could they have got there? Could it be possible, I wondered, that subconsciously, burdened with the responsibility of the custody of such costly gems, I might have risen in my sleep and in a somnolent state removed the pearls to some other hiding place. No, I decided, that theory was too preposterous and absurd for even a moment's consideration.

If I had done that in my sleep I must also have restored them to the safe again in my sleep. It was far more likely that the thief, becoming alarmed over the publicity brought to the Granddeck by the murder, had been afraid to attempt to dispose of gems so well-known as the Gaston pearls and had restored them in the same mysterious way that he had abstracted them. I suggested this theory to Gorman.

"Nothing doing," he sneered. "Any crook daring enough to steal those pearls, once he had got his hands on them, never would return them. Pearls are too easily disposed of. You've got to dig up a better explanation than that."

"What did Mr. Gaston think? What did he say when he found them there?"

"He had nothing to say. He was so tickled at finding them again that he hustled with them right away to the safe deposit vaults and did not rest until he had them safely locked up. He took both jewel cases with him and made me go along with him to protect them."

"Didn't you look at all for the secret passageway I told you about?"

"Still dreaming about that, are you?" scoffed Gorman. "No, we didn't. On the way up to the Granddeck the old man spoke about it and I told him that in my opinion there was nothing to it. After he recovered the pearls he was too excited to think about anything else. It seemed to break him all up, and I took him back to his hotel and left him there. He said he had some writing to do, and that he would meet me at my office at noon today."

"How do you account for the return of the pearls?" I cried desperately. "What's your theory about them?"

"I haven't any," he replied. "It's up to you to explain it. Maybe by the time I come to see you tomorrow you'll have thought up a new yarn to spin."

"Please, please," I called after him as he turned away, "do look tomorrow and see if that secret passage is not where I said it was."

He walked away without answering. Back once more in my cell, I stretched myself despondently on my little iron cot, and closing my eyes, tried to concentrate my thoughts on an attempt to solve this new mystery.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

spark of divine fire kindling within you, who has not yearned with an intense, if momentary yearning to do something worthy. Youth is the day of hope, of enthusiasm, of lofty aspiration. You have felt that there was within you a latent power, a heaven-born capacity, which ought to work miracles and will do so if you have laid the foundation, which prepares you to grasp the opportunity of ambition when it is presented to you. A strong and definite plan of life, which you are willing to adhere to, the goal of sacrifice, application and concentration must be the inward spiritual grace to the life of achievement, which you express to the world by your deeds.

Seek to find the true aim of your ambition in realizing and appropriating to yourselves, identifying yourselves with the power of God, which alone of all powers is inexhaustible in its resources and infinite in its potency. There is no fear here lest the conqueror of the world should sigh and fret because nothing remains beyond to conquer. If this craving is infinite, the satisfaction is infinite also. Star beyond star, world beyond world will start into view as your vision grows clearer, spangling the moral heavens with their glows. "I can do all things." "All things are yours," but this limitless power has its conditions attached. "In Him that empowereth me." But this pledge of universal dominion is qualified by the sequel. Ye are Christ's.

Here then lies the secret of life; the means of fulfilling our expectations, of joining heritage of the past, with the present, that the future might mean a step in advance. The necessity for holding fast to things eternal and looking toward the Cross of Christ for inspiration, forgetting the world, the by-paths of sin and unrighteousness, will fit us for the true conception of ambition, and prepare us to grasp each opportunity as it comes. Life is made up of little incidents and unimportant events which taken by themselves mean little, but placed in conjunction with each other, they carry with them sometimes wonderful results. In Him that empowereth me I can do all things, FOR I am Christ's—and then as we approach the end of life, we shall not say as Wolsey said, "Oh, Cromwell, Cromwell, had I served my God with half the zeal I served my King, he would not in mine age have left me naked to mine enemies."

The Danger.

Meat Injurious To The Kidneys

Take a tablespoonful of salts if back hurts or bladder bothers—meat forms uric acid

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead and you have tingling pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in uric acid, and to make a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink; and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

They will not catch fire from falling sparks. Because they are two shingles in one and self-spacing, they require less labor and less nails to lay.

Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

It's Grandmother's recipe to bring color lustre and youthfulness to hair when faded, streaked or grey

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just on application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it deters so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance.

COURT NOTES

Judge Bell appointed Attorneys Edward T. Kelly and Clarence Kramer as Commissioners to visit nine of the ninety-seven election precincts in Clearfield county for the purpose of securing and canvassing the vote cast for the Million Dollar Road Bond proposition.

This step was made necessary by failure of the election officers to make any return of this vote when they made up their primary return on May 19th.

The Commissioners are empowered to go into the different districts, open the ballot boxes and secure a record of the vote cast from either the tally or return sheets which are supposed to have been placed in the boxes instead of the envelopes filed with the County Commissioners and Prothonotary.

Pentz & Pentz filed an application for divorce on behalf of Michael Carradino who asks to be legally divorced from Maria Ansinto Carradino. JUDGE REED HUNTING CLUB BANQUETED

The "Judge Reed Hunting Club" was tendered its first annual banquet at the home of Hon. John W. Reed on South Front street last evening. This aggregation or organization, which threatens to become one of the institutions of the community, is composed of some twenty-five noted local mountaineers, hunters, fishermen and trail finders. It was instituted, initiated and installed at the headquarters of Roberts and Trout runs in the night, or more properly speaking, the very early morning of May 20th last when upon failure of Judge Reed to return to Pete Brown's from a fishing jaunt in the region named, a posse made up of these variously mentioned experts was hastily thrown together here in Clearfield and pursued the Judge's retreating footsteps all over the barrens therabouts, and contiguous or adjacent thereto.

The judge outdistanced his pursuers and finally located "forked end down" in fairly good fettle at Caledonia and from thence by rail to his own "vine and fig tree", where last night's banquet was held in celebration of the escape from the wilderness.

The banquet was a pippin from "soup to mints," Jeff Weaver added a little comedy to the feast of reason and flow of soul, while Cartoonist Epp and his pencil was also much in evidence. The place cards were gems of art from Bro. Epp's mill and bore the autograph signature of the host for whom the club was named and hunted, and each depicted in picture form some incident of the chase after the fleeing jurist, and will long be prized by the diners.

Before the altar of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal church at 10:30 this morning, Rev. W. W. Hartman united in marriage Norman H. Shranger and Miss Jane Ashenfelter; and at the same time and place Coy N. Shellito and Miss Ruth Ashenfelter, using the impressive ring ceremony of the Methodist ritual.

The brides are sisters and were teachers in the schools of Sandy township during the past year. Both Mr. Shranger and Mr. Shellito were teachers also, before their enlistment in the army. Mr. Shranger is now engaged in business in Duluth, and Mr. Shellito is employed in Akron, Ohio. These young people have a host of friends whom The Progress joins in extending congratulations and best wishes.

Mary E. Shaw. She was born March 16, 1871, in Clearfield, in her beautiful old home down by the river. She was educated in Clearfield schools and Wilson College. In 1893 she was married to David Little, of Pittsburgh. They had two sons, Douglass and James, both of whom are living. Mr. Little died in 1902, and in 1907 Mrs. Little married D. E. Mackey. They lived in St. Louis before the war, when Dr. Mackey was sent to France and Douglass Little also went. After their return Dr. Mackey opened an office in Patton. They lived there and it was there Mrs. Mackey last January took spinal meningitis. She was taken to the best hospital and everything possible was done and she rallied after months of terrible suffering, and as she needed a change, was taken to the home of her son, James Little, who is married and lives in Detroit, Mich. She seemed alright for a week but suddenly took a turn for the worst and died instantly. She leaves behind her to mourn their loss, her husband, two sons and five sisters. She was buried from the home of her son in Detroit, in Grand Lawn cemetery, May 22, 1920.

The bondsman alleges that Bennett was getting ready to jump his bail and as M. L. Lohel, one of the other agents arrested had already done so, he refused to take the chance any longer.

I recommend Foley Kidney Pills to any one who has had kidney or bladder trouble. They help rid the blood of impurities that cause rheumatic pains, swollen, aching and stiff joints and muscles and other symptoms of kidney trouble."

Why Not Try Little "Want Ad"

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

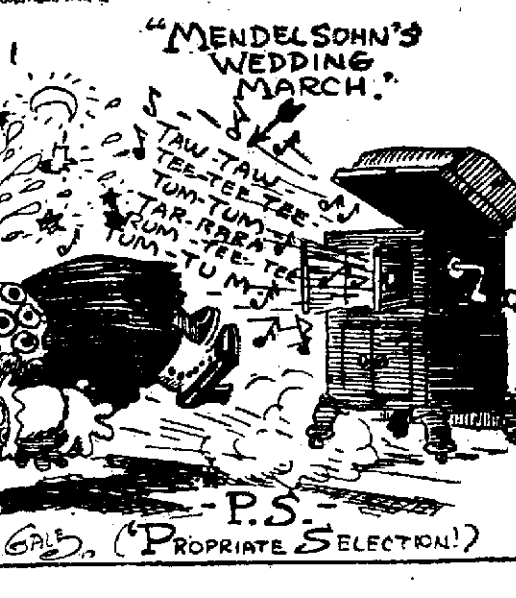

Take one's best and feel one's best food to enjoy an inside bath each morning. Flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of indigestible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, forms toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphate hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is far more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.

He was identified by John Zwick, a resident of Finleyville who saw the bandits enter an automobile near the bank. Zwick was not positive of the identification. He declared that Hogan resembled one of the bandits somewhat but he could not say Hogan was a member of the gang who robbed the bank. About $15,000 in cash and $30,000 in negotiable securities was seized by the robbers. John Zimmers and Frank Martin arrested yesterday were released today.

"Yes sir, the political group managing the Harding campaign is a menace to the state," Wolf declared. He said he had little definite knowledge of the amount of the fund in the state.

WANT FERRY BOAT AT DEER
CREEK

The people in the Deer Creek country and the entire region served by the Deer Creek bridge, which will not likely be replaced this year, are very badly handicapped and discommoded through the loss of the bridge, which went down with the ice early in March last. They feel that a ferry boat should be placed in the river at this point and will petition the County Commissioners to secure a cable and flat boat for such a purpose, the operator of the same to secure remuneration for his services from the travelers he ferries across the river. The expense to the county would be nominal and the necessity for such service seems to require it, and at once.

Mrs. Best has returned from spending the past month in Canton, Ohio.

BONUS BILL
PASSES HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 1—The soldier bonus bill, with benefits of more than $1,400,000,000 for approximately 3,500,000 of the ex-service men, was passed and sent to the senate Saturday by the house.

It received a majority of more than three to one, after a special rule was adopted blocking all amendments. The final vote was 289 to 92, or thirty-five votes more than the necessary two-thirds majority required under the parliamentary procedure to keep out amendments.

Additional taxes of approximately $1,350,000,000, the payment of which would be started next December and continue for three years, are imposed by the bill. None of the benefits granted will be available until June 1, 1921.

The service men are given the option of the cash bonus, home aid, land settlement, paid-up insurance or vocational training and the taxes are imposed upon real estate transfers, stock and grain transactions, with increases over the present sur taxes and tobacco levies.

Final action was had after a fight which developed extreme bitterness and three preliminary tests of strength in which the bonus supporters showed steady gains.

The house was in a wild uproar and confusion through the debate. Speaker Gillett was unable to restore order at any time. Several times the house chamber was a veritable bellamy. Cheers and applause were met by jeers and boos. However loud a speaker raised his voice there were persistent cries of "louder, louder, come down front."

"The measure is the greatest peace-time revenue bill in the history of the country, but debate on it was limited to 40 minutes over the protests of the Democrats and insurgent Republicans who sought to amend the measure.

No immediate action on the measure is contemplated in the senate. It is virtually certain that no action will be taken before the proposed adjournment or recess the latter part of next week.

Congressman Evan J. Jones was one of those who supported the bonus bill.

WILL RUN AGAIN
IF HE GETS OUT

ATLANTA, Ga., May 29—The strangest notification ceremony for any candidate for president of the United States occurred at the federal prison here today, when a committee of Socialists told Eugene V. Debs he had been nominated for the fifth time.

Debs threw his arms about each member of the committee and with a kiss upon the lips for each, declared he was happy beyond words.

"I have always been a radical—never more so than now," Debs declared in his speech of acceptance. "I have never been afraid of becoming too radical but I have feared becoming conservative."

He quoted a speech before his imprisonment for violation of the espionage act in which he declared his sympathy with the Russian revolution.

"I said I was a Bolshevik, and I meant it—and I mean it now," he asserted. A member of the committee applauded.

The official reception took place in the office of Prison Warden Zerbst, who permitted motion pictures to be made, both in the office and on the front steps outside the prison walls, in which the ceremony of presenting the bouquet of red carnations and the kisses of greeting were repeated.

Miss Helen Dunsmore, of Phillipsburg, attended the Senior reception at the High School last evening and was a guest at the home of W. E. Phillips on Fourth street.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK

Rev. Baldwin took for his theme "The Opportunity of Ambition." His discourse was most favorably commented upon by his auditors generally. His sermon, in part, follows:

The Senior Class reception at the High School auditorium last evening was a particularly brilliant gathering, which was participated in by the twenty-four members of the class, their parents and friends enjoying the occasion immensely.

The Junior High School commencement was held last evening and the Eighth Graders will present "Paul Revere's Ride" at the High School auditorium this evening.

The Senior Class commencement will be held Wednesday evening.

"I Can Do All Things Through Christ That Strengthen Me. I Have Strength For All Things In Him That Empowereth Me."

(Philippians IV, 13.) Our true attitude to the past is one of reverence and veneration. We are heirs of the past, stewards of the present and trustees of the future. The great law of evolution has emphasized an indebtedness to the past by showing us how the permanent and valuable acquisitions of the age are transmitted to the heirs of the ages. It has emphasized our relations to the present by pointing out the importance of environment. It has emphasized our relations to the future by showing how the whole process of nature is striving for a richer and more abundant life, and that where one generation fails to attain it prepares a generation that is to follow.

We cannot therefore, ignore our inheritance, be it what it may, for it will lead us to the present, the time of opportunity and advantage. The attitude of mind, the personal conception of existence are a heritage of the past. Mantled in the cloak of oblivion, yet still it hovers over near to remind, influence and mould our attainments upon a pattern that we can see and add the efforts of our lives, intellects and attainments to the perfection and completion.

We cannot be unmindful of the acquisitions of our ancestors. The past is a great inheritance, the present a splendid opportunity and the future a noble incentive.

Failure to respond to any one of the influences means delay and hindrance in the direction of true progress. We may be so engrossed in the present as to be oblivious of the past and careless of the future. The influence of the past may be so strong as to call us away from our own attainment; that of the present may cause us to rush headlong into oblivion and fail for the future.

He is a great man who can feel all the influences and give the right response to each.

To feel the thrill of ambition impelling one toward attainment is a noble and inspiring quality, but to be successful, it must be cumulative. It is only by careful preparation that we are able to grasp the opportunity of ambition.

Preparation and education alone can produce the desired results. Right thinking, right living and right knowledge leads us to cultivated intellect which has a command of the universe.

Ambition, emulation and rivalry play an important part in the education of the world. We cannot shut our eyes to its splendid achievement in politics, in social life, in mechanical inventions, in literature and art. It is stimulus that produces valuable results.

If ambition leads on the last inspiration of many a noble mind. If by ambition angels fell, by ambition men have risen. It has been the force that has drawn the world forward from lower to higher. If it is clear that the worst evils which have afflicted mankind must be eradicated also with the most splendid advances in human progress and civilization.

I speak to you therefore, as to ambitious young men and women. These are only a beyond hope who have no spirit of emulation, no craving for excellence—those only in whom there are devoid of ambition. Seek therefore, to possess this quality. But be sure to purify your ambition, to consecrate it, to direct it through worthy channels and to worthy aims.

If indeed ambition has achieved splendid results, it can only have done so by virtue of splendid qualities. It must contain in itself true and shining elements which we cannot afford to neglect.

The chief element in ambition is a pursuit of power. The acquisition of power gives a satisfaction quite independently of the exercise of power. Whatever form power may take, whether intellectual eminence or social influence or physical strength, it is a thing which man desires, which he cannot help desiring, he and for himself. It is seed of splendid achievements, a germ of spirit and cultivated. By our very constitution we feel a happiness in making the best of ourselves; in developing and improving our faculties, irrespective of any ulterior results. But a faculty improved is a power gained.

It would stimulate in you that high spirit of ambition which forms the seed of great achievement. I ask you to play for power, to pursue power, to grasp at power with all the force and determination of your command.

AN EXCEPTIONALLY FINE PICTURE

Ashley J. Gulich has on display in H. P. Bridge's window on Market street, an oil painting of a lion's head, which is being very much admired by persons passing that way. The painting was done by Will P. Bridge and is exceptionally artistic and realistic. It need but be seen to be appreciated.

Ask the ten best dairymen you know
"Do you feed on Pasture?"

Their answers will convince you that the big producers don't depend upon grass, but find it necessary to supply elements that properly balance it. Most grass is so deficient in protein that a cow would have to eat several times her capacity to obtain enough protein for her maximum production—grass is practically never balanced.

This is why repeated tests have shown that the average cow on pasture will produce
6 lbs. more milk per day

when fed Purina Cow Chow. This increase is obtained at an additional cost of about 10c per day per cow. Figure what this would mean to you for a week or a month.

Purina Cow Chow

accomplishes this because it contains such milk makers as linseed meal, gluten feed from corn, humany feed, molasses, cottonseed meal and wheat alfalfa meal.

Prove that you can increase the milk flow six pounds per day by putting Purina Cow Chow to the test. Ample stock on hand.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

CURWENSVILLE

Frank S. Thompson and son came up from Philadelphia and spent several days of this week with Mr. Thompson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Thompson.

George Goodwin, a former Curwensville boy, now located in Cincinnati, Ohio, was a Curwensville visitor over Sunday. He is a son of Edgar Goodwin, a former postmaster of this place.

A fire alarm for the First Ward was sounded Monday forenoon at a little after 9 o'clock. Firemen and citizens in responding to the call, found flames issuing from the second story window of a house occupied by Oscar Ardary and his family. A strong stream of water was turned on and in about five minutes, with the aid of water and chemicals, the flames were quenched. The family's clothing was literally destroyed, as well as considerable household goods. The fire is supposed to have started by some mice igniting matches.

H. S. Landy, a resident of Washington, D. C., arrived in Curwensville Sunday, in order to be present at the wedding of his son, Gilbert M. Landy to Miss Esther Robinson, which took place Monday forenoon at the Robinson home. This was his first visit to our mountain village, and he expressed himself delighted with everything that he saw about the town.

Howard Thompson and family came over from Bellefonte on Sunday, to spend Memorial Day in his native town. V. L. Spencer and wife, also from Bellefonte, and former residents of this town, also spent several with friends.

The annual Baccalaureate sermon for the graduates of the High School was delivered in the Methodist church on Sunday evening, by Rev. J. C. Collins, the pastor. Rev. John Cameron, pastor of the Baptist church, was booked for this occasion, but for some reason best known to himself, failed to respond, and Rev. Collins was substituted. He took for his text a line found in Matthew 5th, 30th verse: "It is profitable for thee?" His discourse was a fine one and delivered in language which every one recognized as coming from a master mind and of deep research. If his hearers, especially the graduates who are just starting out on life's rugged pathway, but follow out his admonition, they cannot help but become better men and women and meet with success in life. Everyone who was present and heard this sermon, was well pleased with the manner in which Rev. Collins handled his subject, and many of his quotations will linger long in their memories. The graduating class has now passed the High School period, and it is now up to them to make good in whatever vocation they assume in their life work.

Philip Robinson came up from Philadelphia, in order to be present at the wedding of his sister, Miss Esther Robinson Monday forenoon.

Dr. Leland Moore, who at one time practiced dentistry in this place, now residing in Altoona, was a Curwensville visitor Monday.

Daniel Leathers, who kept a restaurant on Elbert street during the years that the big mill was in operation in this town, is visiting in the home of his brother, Harry Leathers, in the Nantux colony. He is just recovering from a serious attack of the influenza and was recently discharged from a Cleveland hospital, in which city he has become a resident.

William Daub, who has been employed by the Curwensville Heating and Plumbing Company for three years past, has resigned and will now go it single-handed. He is a good plumber and will not want for employment.

Mrs. Hiram Gawler left for West Virginia Monday, where she will spend several months visiting with relatives and friends.

John W. Sykes, formerly superintendent of the Elk Tannery in this place, now acting in the same capacity of a tannery down in Lycoming county, was here several days this week.

Mrs. J. M. Carlisle, who has been making her home with several of her children at Nantux, Cambria county, was a guest in the home of Captain and Mrs. J. E. Kratzer on Main street, several days this week.

Dorsey Williams, one of the old-time fiddle drummers, who resided in this place for a number of years, was a Curwensville visitor on Monday. Dorsey claims that the brand of music that he touched on all previous occasions years ago, is now a defect issue, as brass bands have taken the place of drums.

then know that they are under suspicion. So long as they are employed at the Granddeck we know where to lay hands on them when we want them."

"That's so," he admitted. "I'll say nothing for the present. As I won't be living there until after this is cleared up, it can make no difference. But, look here, young man, why doesn't this Bradford girl come forward and clear you of this charge? She was with you at the time. She knows you didn't do it."

"Because I will not permit her to do so," I replied with heat. "I love Barbara Bradford!"

"That's it, is it?" he commented, giving me a quizzical glance from under his bushy white eyebrows.

"I wouldn't for all the world," I continued. "Have her mixed up in this. Her sister is to be married tomorrow, and the scandal might stop the wedding; and besides I'm not going to have it known that she was there alone with me that night in my rooms. I love her too well for that. Some day I am going to ask her to be my wife."

He raised his eyebrows.

"And on what do you expect to marry?" he inquired.

"Of course I have said nothing as yet," I hastened to explain; "I've nothing to offer her."

"No," he agreed, "you've nothing to offer her"—and then with a meaning glance he added a little word that in spite of my predicament made my heart sing with joy and stirred my expectations mightily—"you've nothing to offer her—yet."

"But cheer up," he advised as a parting word of counsel. "I'll get in touch with Gorman and your lawyer as soon as I leave here today, and tomorrow we will find out about that secret passage you think you have discovered."

Computation that I ever had doubted the integrity of his purpose toward me snote as he departed. I tried to think of something to say to express my gratitude to him, to let him know how much I appreciated his coming at once to my aid, but the only thing I could think of slipped from my lips: "So am I," he answered grimly, and went his way.

One thing now I certainly was sure of—his was not the master-mind that had planned all the criminal deeds, but the mystery of the Granddeck was still as much of a mystery as ever.

CHAPTER XII.

It was the second day after this—the day set for Claire Bradford's wedding—that in the morning, much earlier than customary, Gorman came to the prison to see me.

I met him jubilantly. My uncle's unexpected return to the city and his generous and convincing offers of aid had filled me with new hopes. I trusted, too, that old Rufus' keen eyes quickly would discover the secret passageway now that I had indicated to him where to look for it. I was confidently expecting that the resulting developments quickly would free me from even the suspicion of being a murderer. The minute, however, that I laid eyes on Gorman I knew that something had gone wrong.

"What is it?" I cried. "What's the matter now?"

"You're a wonderful liar, you are," was his surly greeting, "with your pipe dreams about secret passageways and stolen pearls."

"What do you mean?" I replied. "I had not the least idea what he was getting at."

"You almost had me believing you," he said savagely. "It wasn't that I knew that Wick and that girl up there were crooks. I would wash my hands of the whole affair."

"I don't understand," I answered indignantly. "Every statement I have made to you has been the absolute truth."

"Yes, it has!" he sneered.

Ordinarily I would have resented anyone talking to me in this manner, but I felt that under no circumstances could I afford to quarrel with Gorman. He was the only friend I had in the whole city that I could rely on, excepting of course my great-uncle. I contented myself with merely reasserting:

"I tell you it is all true—every word of it."

"The old man's home—old Rufus," he responded irrelevantly.

"I know," I replied. "I saw him for a few minutes day before yesterday. He promised to do everything in his power to free me as speedily as possible. After talking with him I am confident that he had nothing whatever to do with any part of the plot. Have you seen him?"

"Yes," said Gorman, significantly. "I've seen him. He looked me up yesterday and we went over the case together. He suggested that we go up to the Granddeck and look over the apartment, and we did. The minute we got in he went to the wall safe and opened it up and—"

Gorman stopped short and looked at me. It seemed to me that there were doubt and distrust in his expression.

"Go on," I cried, "what did you

"You're a Wonderful Liar, You Are," Was His Surly Greeting.

"We found," he said, speaking slowly and putting special emphasis on his third word, "two jewel boxes there, the one with the pearls and the other one."

"What," I cried, aghast at this incredible bit of news, "two jewel cases?"

"Sure we did," he announced triumphantly. "And the pearls were there as safe as when the old man went away. Now what have you got to say to that?"

What could I say? I knew as positively as I knew that I was alive that on that Saturday when I had opened the wall safe to put away my money there had been but one of the jewel boxes there. I had taken it out and had examined its contents again. With the aid of a lighted match I had explored every corner of the steel-lined receptacle. The box containing the pearls and the rest of the valuables in the Gaston collection was gone. Now the pearls were safely back there again. How could that be explained? The mystery was too much for me.

There was not the slightest reason for me to believe that Gorman was lying to me now. I had found him in all our dealings straightforward and candid. If he said he had seen great-uncle Rufus find the pearls there it must be so, but how could they have got there? Could it be possible, I wondered, that subconsciously, burdened with the responsibility of the custody of such costly gems, I might have risen in my sleep and in a somnolent state removed the pearls to some other hiding place. No, I decided, that theory was too preposterous and absurd for even a moment's consideration.

If I had done that in my sleep I must also have restored them to the safe again in my sleep. It was far more likely that the thief, becoming alarmed over the publicity brought to the Granddeck by the murder, had been afraid to attempt to dispose of gems so well-known as the Gaston pearls and had restored them in the same mysterious way that he had abstracted them. I suggested this theory to Gorman.

"Nothing doing," he sneered. "Any crook daring enough to steal those pearls, once he had got his hands on them, never would return them. Pearls are too easily disposed of. You've got to dig up a better explanation than that."

"What did Mr. Gaston think? What did he say when he found them there?"

"He had nothing to say. He was so tickled at finding them again that he hustled with them right away to the safe deposit vaults and did not rest until he had them safely locked up. He took both jewel cases with him and made me go along with him to protect them."

"Didn't you look at all for the secret passageway I told you about?"

"Still dreaming about that, are you?" scoffed Gorman. "No, we didn't. On the way up to the Granddeck the old man spoke about it and I told him that in my opinion there was nothing to it. After he recovered the pearls he was too excited to think about anything else. It seemed to break him all up, and I took him back to his hotel and left him there. He said he had some writing to do, and that he would meet me at my office at noon today."

"How do you account for the return of the pearls?" I cried desperately. "What's your theory about them?"

"I haven't any," he replied. "It's up to you to explain it. Maybe by the time I come to see you tomorrow you'll have thought up a new yarn to spin."

"Please, please," I called after him as he turned away. "do look tomorrow and see if that secret passage is not where I said it was."

He walked away without answering. Back once more in my cell, I stretched myself despondently on my little iron cot, and closing my eyes, tried to concentrate my thoughts on an attempt to solve this new mystery.

spark of divine fire kindling within you, who has not yearned with an intense, if momentary yearning to do something worthy. Youth is the day of hope, of enthusiasm, of lofty aspiration. You have felt that there was within you a latent power, a heaven-born capacity, which ought to work miracles and will do so if you have laid the foundation, which prepares you to grasp the opportunity of ambition when it is presented to you. A strong and definite plan of life, which you are willing to adhere to, the goal of sacrifice, application and concentration must be the inward spiritual grace to the life of achievement, which you express to the world by your deeds.

Seek to find the true aim of your ambition in realizing and appropriating to yourselves, identifying yourselves with the power of God, which alone of all powers is inexhaustible in its resources and infinite in its potency. There is no fear here lest the conqueror of the world should sigh and fret because nothing remains beyond to conquer. If this craving is infinite, the satisfaction is infinite also. Star beyond star, world beyond world will start into view as your vision grows clearer, spangling the moral heavens with their glows. "I can do all things." "All things are yours," but this limitless power has its conditions attached. "In Him that empowereth me." But this pledge of universal dominion is qualified by the sequel. Ye are Christ's.

Here then lies the secret of life; the means of fulfilling our expectations, of joining heritage of the past, with the present, that the future might mean a step in advance. The necessity for holding fast to things eternal and looking toward the Cross of Christ for inspiration, forgetting the world, the by-paths of sin and unrighteousness, will fit us for the true conception of ambition, and prepare us to grasp each opportunity as it comes. Life is made up of little incidents and unimportant events which taken by themselves mean little, but placed in conjunction with each other, they carry with them sometimes wonderful results. In Him that empowereth me I can do all things, FOR I am Christ's—and then as we approach the end of life, we shall not say as Wolsey said, "Oh, Cromwell, Cromwell, had I served my God with half the zeal I served my King, he would not in mine age have left me naked to mine enemies."

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Many complaints are being received by me regarding destruction by boys and young men to shade trees, flowers, shrubbery, lawns, cemetery lots, etc., and I take this means of calling the attention of parents and children to this fact. Hereafter a close watch will be maintained throughout the borough and all persons offending in any instance, will be picked up and dealt with as severely as the law will allow.

Particular complaints are from the Third Ward region and the Park and those marauders are bound to come to grief if they don't stop their practices.

Meat Injurious To The Kidneys

Take a tablespoonful of salts if back hurts or bladder bothers—meat forms uric acid

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead and you have tingling pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in uric acid, and to break up and carry out of the body all sources of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink; and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

NEPONSET ROOFS

For Buildings of All Kinds

For sloping roofs on residences, garages, bungalows, or public buildings, Neponset Twin Shingles make as handsome and durable a roof as it is possible to find anywhere—and they are most economical.

Neponset Twin Shingles are impregnated with asphalt and heavily surfaced with crushed slate. No wonder they resist time and wear. Their natural slate-red and slate-green colors are restful and beautiful.

They will not catch fire from falling sparks. Because they are two shingles in one and self-spacing, they require less labor and less nails to lay.

"The Heart Of a Child"

From the novel by Frank Danby

"Wat a lark, Sal!" Yer father bashed yer mother's 'ead in!" cried the young cockney boy to the girl dancing to a hand-organ in the streets of London's tenement district. Thus did tragedy come early into the life of Sally Snape, leaving her alone in the world to work out her salvation and happiness as best she could, with only her innate sense or the right thing. This is the beginning—its NAZI-MOVA'S greatest picture.

Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

It's Grandmother's recipe to bring color lustre and youthfulness to hair when faded, streaked or grey

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just on application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it deters so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance.

COURT NOTES

Judge Bell appointed Attorneys Edward T. Kelly and Clarence Kramer as Commissioners to visit nine of the ninety-seven election precincts in Clearfield county for the purpose of securing and canvassing the vote cast for the Million Dollar Road Bond proposition.

This step was made necessary by failure of the election officers to make any return of this vote when they made up their primary return on May 19th.

The Commissioners are empowered to go into the different districts, open the ballot boxes and secure a record of the vote cast from either the tally or return sheets which are supposed to have been placed in the boxes instead of the envelopes filed with the County Commissioners and Prothonotary.

Pentz & Pentz filed an application for divorce on behalf of Michael Carradino who asks to be legally divorced from Maria Ansinto Carradino. The statement filed recites that the Carradinos were married August 16, 1910, and the husband quit November 17, 1919, because as he alleges Joe Sarniello supplanted him in his wife's affections.

JUDGE REED HUNTING CLUB BANQUETED

The "Judge Reed Hunting Club" was tendered its first annual banquet at the home of Hon. John W. Reed on South Front street last evening. This aggregation or organization, which threatens to become one of the institutions of the community, is composed of some twenty-five noted local mountaineers, hunters, fishermen and trail finders. It was instituted, initiated and installed at the headquarters of Roberts and Trout runs in the night, or more properly speaking, the very early morning of May 20th last when upon failure of Judge Reed to return to Pete Brown's from a fishing jaunt in the region named, a posse made up of these variously mentioned experts was hastily thrown together here in Clearfield and pursued the Judge's retreating footsteps all over the barrens therabouts, and contiguous or adjacent thereto.

The judge outdistanced his pursuers and finally located "forked end down" in fairly good fettle at Caledonia and from thence by rail to his own "vine and fig tree", where last night's banquet was held in celebration of the escape from the wilderness.

The banquet was a pipkin from "soup to mints," Jeff Weaver added a little comedy to the feast of reason and flow of soul, while Cartoonist Epp and his pencil was also much in evidence. The place cards were gems of art from Bro. Epp's mill and bore the autograph signature of the host for whom the club was named and hunted, and each depicted in picture form some incident of the chase after the fleeing jurist, and will long be prized by the diners.

SHRANGER—ASHENFELTER SHELLITO—ASHENFELTER

Before the altar of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal church at 10:30 this morning, Rev. W. W. Hartman united in marriage Norman H. Shranger and Miss Jane Ashenfelter; and at the same time and place Coy N. Shellito and Miss Ruth Ashenfelter, using the impressive ring ceremony of the Methodist ritual.

The brides are sisters and were teachers in the schools of Sandy township during the past year. Both Mr. Shranger and Mr. Shellito were teachers also, before their enlistment in the army. Mr. Shranger is now engaged in business in Duluth, and Mr. Shellito is employed in Akron, Ohio. These young people have a host of friends whom The Progress joins in extending congratulations and best wishes.

Mary E. Shaw. She was born March 16, 1871, in Clearfield, in her beautiful old home down by the river. She was educated in Clearfield schools and Wilson College. In 1893 she was married to David Little, of Pittsburgh. They had two sons, Douglass and James, both of whom are living. Mr. Little died in 1902, and in 1907 Mrs. Little married D. E. Mackey. They lived in St. Louis before the war, when Dr. Mackey was sent to France and Douglass Little also went. After their return Dr. Mackey opened an office in Patton. They lived there and it was there Mrs. Mackey last January took spinal meningitis. She was taken to the best hospital and everything possible was done and she rallied after months of terrible suffering, and as she needed a change, was taken to the home of her son, James Little, who is married and lives in Detroit, Mich. She seemed alright for a week but suddenly took a turn for the worst and died instantly. She leaves behind her to mourn their loss her husband, two sons and five sisters. She was buried from the home of her son in Detroit, in Grand Lawn cemetery, May 22, 1920.

Bennett general agent of the Polican Insurance company of Philadelphia who was recently convicted in the Clearfield county courts of conspiracy and false pretense and who had been out on bail pending argument of his motion for a new trial was surrendered by his bondsman, one of the officials of the insurance company, on Saturday last and was lodged in jail by Sheriff Gorman on Sunday morning. The bondsman alleges that Bennett was getting ready to jump his bail and as M. L. Lohel, one of the other agents arrested had already done so, he refused to take the chance any longer.

Securing the assistance of Fire Chief Knepp the fire "whistle" was blown at 11 o'clock and soon a crew of 65 men were en route for Snow Shoe on a special New York Central train and put in all day Sunday fighting the flames.

Why Not Try Little "Want Ad"

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

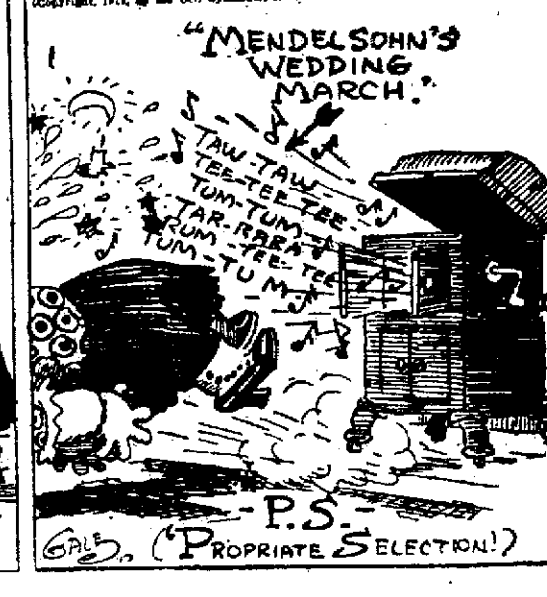

Take one's best and feel one's best food to enjoy an inside bath each morning. Flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of indigestible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, forms toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, blotchy spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphate hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is far more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.
